

Last Will & Testament & Other Instructions

15. Pete Stanton                      The big brother. You probably didn't know I thought of you that way. The old saying of wishes were fishes comes to mind, but, that is all water under the bridge. I wish nothing but the best for you and your family and I did think about you throughout all the years.
16. David Mixner                      He has gone where fierce indignation can no longer lacerate his heart. Go traveler; imitate him, if you can. I am not the fighter you are my friend. Perhaps that big heart of yours can take it better than I can or could. Good luck and peace. I think you should read Gad Beck's book again. Let me summarize it for you. "Just say Jew and it's true".
17. Michael Ross                      I'm at a bit of a loss of what to say to you Michael. I will say the simple things. You are a good man. I cared for you. I hope nothing but the best for you.
18. Layne Britton                      Be Happy. You have your children. They have a good father who loves them. That's all that matters no matter how many times they screw up or how much different they turn out to be than you. Love and accept them, and yourself, and be happy. I shouldn't have to say this to someone with such an extraordinary mind, but listen up. Chill. Be happy. Guide by example. Love.
19. Bryan Singer                      Bryan, my brilliant friend. All the accolades you'll ever need are within you now. I always enjoyed our time together and how many people can you say that about in this world. You will make your own luck, but I will add my best wishes on top of it. All the best always.
20. Jeremy Gordon                      Be the best you can be. Enjoy life.
21. Jessie Gordon                      Same. Take care.

For all those people that ever worked for us, claimed to be our friends and whom we were so generous and kind too that they ended up stabbing us in the back and effectively destroying our lives, I don't have anything to say to you. I find the dichotomy fascinating in a morbid sort of fashion. You ate at our table. You were paid or given money from our pockets generously. We treated everyone in our business and personal lives in a generous and kind fashion. You were treated with nothing but the greatest respect, equality and caring. We gave freely and opened our hearts, home and lives to you in one way or another. The best advice we could offer, our true friendship, and we never let you down.

There were many people in our lives and perhaps because of that some felt cheated of not being given enough. If that is true, I deeply regret it, because I think we always tried to be generous and do the right thing. For those of you that were simply greedy or homophobic, I guess you did what you thought you had to do in order to survive or get ahead. Perhaps that is the way you were raised or perhaps that is the way America is now.
